This Is Where Your Soul Meets Design

There's a certain whimsy that shows up with Karen Ice-Burris. Whether it shows up in one-of-a-kind textiles and lighting or subtly appears through contemporary lines and warm undertones, every space she touches gives your soul permission to breathe.

She's a designer who believes the best inspiration comes from listening to the people who actually live in the homes she designs. They are her canvas. And while she's a true creative who isn't shy about admitting her long-term love affair with textiles and fabrics, she's also a highly organized business owner who is brilliant at making everything easy for her clients.

"My goal with all my work is to take my ego out of it," she says. "We've made every aspect of our work about the client. We want to know who our clients are and discover what they want."

Whether working on custom builds, home remodels, or color consultations, Karen's strength is in helping her clients see beyond the pretty things of the design world.

"Our environment affects us every day," she says.

"Life can be disruptive, but if you can design your home for joy, peace, and comfort, it really does empower a better life."
